Mr. and Mrs. Curry of "Cactus Gardens" enjoyed the Buckner's Famous Dixie Jubilee Concert Company in Sonoma Friday night. Mr. and Mrs. Cassidy, Mr. Erhard Steiger and family and Mr. and Mrs. Joe Keiser and family were among the many who took in the show and all report a good time.

HAPPY JACK.

VINEBURG

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Batto and children were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hiser Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bundshee of Rhine Farm were the week end guests of friends in the bay cities.

Emel Andrieux a well known young man of the "Bear Flag City" was a guest at Batto's Spur on Tuesday last.

Quite a number of our prominent society gentlemen attended the "Mardi Gras" festival in Sonoma Tuesday evening.

Mrs. John Wadsworth was a passenger on Thursday morning's train on a visit to friends and relatives in the bay cities.

Henry Gundlach of San Francisco transacted business at the Gundlach-Bundshee wine plant—Rhine Farm—on Tuesday.

Now that the election recount for the office of Justice of Peace is over, "Let us have Peace" as we have the Justice and Vineburg precinct landed him. Its right, believe me.

Last Sunday being a pleasant day following the long spell of inclement weather quite a number of visitors were in the Burg during the day.

Our genial station agent, Grove Rubke, seems to perfectly happy since the company has renovated his office, and now he looks just like a bird in a golden cage, "A Bird of Paradise."

Mr. Norman Heggie and family and Fred Batto and family accompanied by Miss Adele Andrieux motored to Hooker Falls on Sunday last and enjoyed the picturesque scenery of that romantic spot. All were delighted with the trip.

Mr. and Mrs. August Figone and son, Master Ernest, of San Francisco, were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Batto on Sunday last. Mr. Figone is one of the progressive business men of the North Beach section in the bay city and proprietor of the celebrated Vineburg wine vaults.

We return thanks for the cordial invitation of the Five O'clock Tea Club, as their guest of honor, to the opening of the exposition on Saturday, Feb. 20, 1915, and on the advice of our physician we must decline. The doctor says that the temperature of San Fran-

Monday, Washington's birthday, will be generally observed in Sonoma.

The summer resorts in the neighborhood of Sonoma are preparing for a big run the coming season.

Sonoma is not a slow town when it comes to the matter of entertainment. Two dances held on the same night is evidence of this fact.

Miss Alice Young a graduate of the Sonoma high school has taken charge of the Tale Vista school house wherein school reopened a few weeks ago.

Bricklaying on the cement foundation of the Sonoma Grammar school was commenced Monday and with proper weather conditions will be completed in May. So says R. H. Ingraham, the contractor.

cisco is too wet for my dry temperament. Thanks, ladies!

Our local merchant Adolph Rubke is the most contented man in Vineburg. During the recent wet spell of weather a drummer said to him: "Well, Dolph, how is business?" Dolph replied: "Oh, its looking for its flat on its back and cannot look any other way. 'I should worry.'"

We always knew that a Mexican would do anything from breaking a wild horse to starting a revolution, but we never thought he would steal the wick out of a man's lantern, but he will. We now believe he would steal an electric light if he thought the "live wire" was dead. Leave it to the Mexican.

EASY JIM.

enjoyable affair. The masqueraders engaged in the merry dance until the small hours of morning. A bountiful repast was partaken of.

The "Seals" are preparing for their practice work at Boyes Spring. Several of the boys are already on the ground and manager Harry Wolverton is expected to arrive next week.

One of the most enjoyable events of the year took place Tuesday night, when the young social set of Sonoma and suburbs gathered at Union Hall and participated in the merry dance. The affair was given in honor of the 23d birthday of Ralph Evans and was conducted under the management of Misses Del and Marjorie Livernash. The modern dances were indulged in, including the "Moonlight." During the festivities a birthday cake was cut, refreshments served and brief addresses delivered.

Personal Mention

P. W. Hurdall, of Santa Rosa, arrived in Sonoma Wednesday.

R. F. Lambert, of Napa, registered here Wednesday.

Rev. J. Henry Oehlhoff was visiting in Schellville last Friday.

James Kehoe, of Duhring's, spent Sunday with relatives at Embarcadero.

The stork visited the home of Mrs. Sorini and presented her with a 7 1/2 pound daughter.

Mrs. C. Carpenter and son, Milton Carpenter, of Dixon, attended the funeral of her uncle, H. C. Culbertson, last Friday.

We noticed the smiling countenance of John Yenni on our streets Saturday. Mr. Yenni reports everything prosperous on his ranch.

Ernest Wm. Warren and wife, of San Francisco, are now residents of Sonoma. Mr. Warren is an old newspaperman and has accepted a position on the Index-Tribune.

Mr. M. Morris visited Sonoma last week to look after his vast interests in this section. While not a resident here Sonomans would gladly welcome him as one of their own.

Miss Schumann, who is visiting her parents at Buena Vista, accidentally cut the palm of her hand almost through that member. Dr. Gobel was called and put two stitches in the wound.

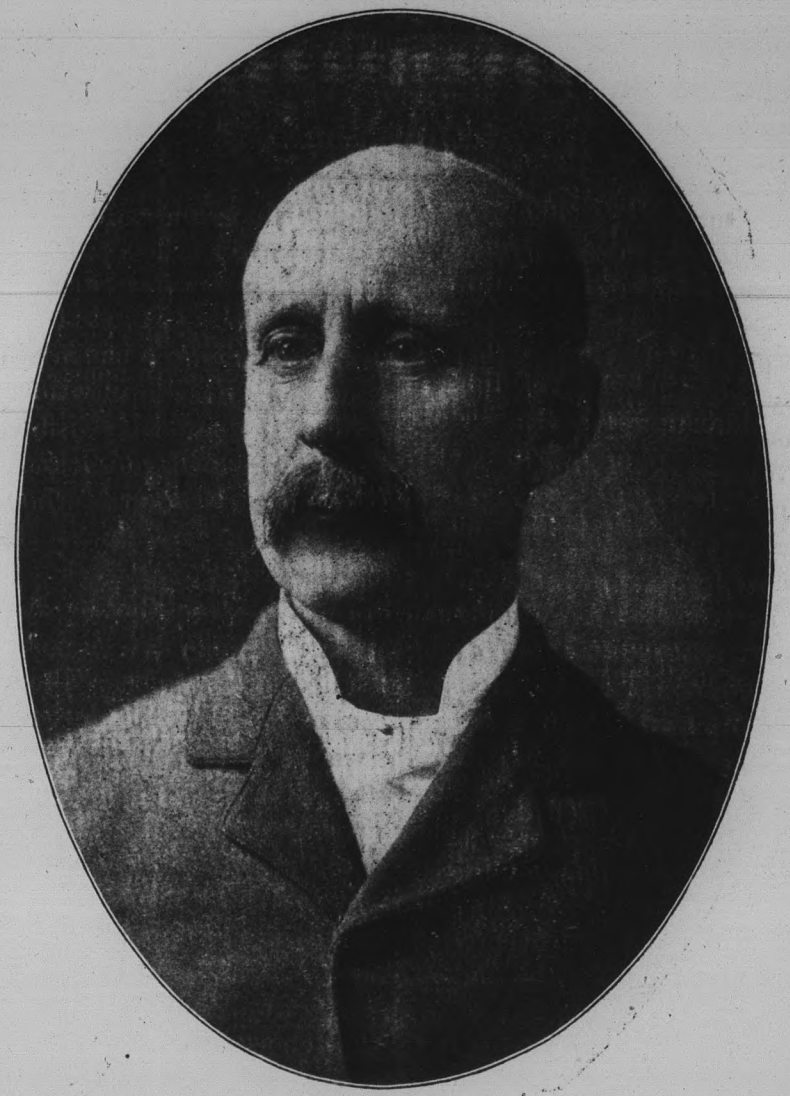

The Fasting Tailor Dies.

Louis Roth, the Palo Alto tailor, whose long-continued abstinence from food has been watched with growing interest by Stanford scientists, died after fasting 61 days. Roth's weight dropped from 135 to 84 pounds. Prior to his death he was approached by a moving picture film man.

N. P. R. R. C'o. Annual "Vacation 1915."

For years past it has been the custom of the Northern Pacific Railroad Company to publish a neat pamphlet descriptive of the various summer resorts along its line. "Vacation 1915" is one of the best known advertising mediums in the State and contains excellent descriptions of the various summer resorts in northern California. By filling out the "Information Blank" painted in another column, and addressing J. J. Geary, general freight and passenger agent, San Francisco, will receive a free copy.

One of Glen Ellen's Leading Business Men

Charles Poppe

Among the oldest residents of Glen Ellen may be mentioned the name of Charles J. Poppe. Mr. Poppe was appointed postmaster in April, 1890, and has conducted the affairs of that office with credit to himself and the people of his neighborhood ever since. He has been in business in Glen Ellen since April, 1st, 1883, on which date he married. As a result of that marriage, Mr. Poppe is the proud father of four children. In 1905 Mr. Poppe suffered the loss of his business through fire. Being of a progressive nature he immediately began the construction of a modern business house of brick. This building was razed during the earthquake of 1906. With undaunted energy Mr. Poppe again rebuilt, this time of stone, in which building he is now enjoying a prosperous business.

Some "Twenty Years Ago" in Old Sonoma

Henry A. Pickett, pioneer, died of Bright's disease.

Frank O. Morris was appointed Constable in Russian River Township.

Misses Lola and Natalie Harashty entertained a number of their friends.

Miss Melvina Palastre, of El Verano, had a narrow escape in a runaway accident.

John Kelly, an aged rancher, sold a band of cattle for $195. He was robbed of the receipts of the sale.

Eugene Donaldson was injured by being run over. The two front wheels of a wagon passed over his body.

C. Meyer resigns as Poundmaster of Washington Township. M. V. Dana was appointed in his place.

Frederick J. Clark and Jas. E. Elphick were appointed Justice and Constable respectively in Vallejo Township.

A. Pinelli purchased the "Blue Wing" property on Spain street from the Tivnen heirs. The consideration was $425.

Emil Pauli died in San Francisco. He was a charter member of Sonoma Parlor No. 111, N. S. G. W. and a charter member of the Sonoma Volunteer Fire Department.

The following names appear in the social events that occurred 20 years ago: Dr. H. H. Davis, J. Roderick ten Bosch, Miss Josie Collins, Mrs. Maria V. Cutter, Mrs. Lulu de Emparan, Mrs. N. Fowler, Mrs. G. S. Harris.

The Sonoma Volunteer Fire Department held its annual banquet at which the following were present: D. D. Davison, J. H. Seipp, President of the City Board of Trustees, Fred T. Duhring, Carl Dresel, George Engler and Julius E. Poppe.

Farmers Take Notice

Mr. Anderson, the popular horseshoer of Vineburg, had the honor of placing the first set of shoes on the finest draft stallion ever raised in this valley. The horse is three years old and weighs 1820 pounds. He is some horse and they will have to go some to import one from Europe any better as he is a perfect model. He is owned by Erhard Steiger at Schellville.

Card of Thanks

We take this medium to express our heartfelt thanks to every one who so kindly gave us their aid and sympathy shown in many ways in our recent bereavement. Mrs. SARAH CULBERTSON, Mrs. EFFIE SEARCY, LUTIA M. CULBERTSON.

HIGH SCHOOL NOTES

Friday night, the 26th of February, the boys basket ball team will play the Napa High school team at Napa. This will be the last game of the year and the boys intend to try hard to end the season with a victory.

Last week we welcomed Angeline Forni, Edna Ammon and Warren Brown to school. This brings the enrollment for the year up to seventy-two.

Next Friday evening the students of the High school will celebrate the birthdays of Lincoln and Washington with a banquet and dance. During the banquet toasts will be given and stories told of the two great men. Everyone anticipates a most enjoyable time.

WEDGEWOOD RANGE!

Absolutely the Greatest Fuel Saver--
The Most Perfect Baker Made

The old way of buying a stove was to "pay before you tried." If the stove you bought proved a failure you were compelled "to take your medicine" and make the best of it. The new way of buying a stove—Sonoma Valley Furniture Co. way—allows you 30 days' free trial in your own home.

Sent to Your Home on Approval

No matter how good a cook you are, no matter how careful your marketing, all your efforts will be wasted if you have to cook on a stove not properly built to meet California fuel conditions. California climate requires two distinct features in a range: It requires a range that will withstand dampness; it requires a special flue construction that will burn properly in the face of ever-changing winds. The Wedgewood is the only range built along scientific principles, especially constructed to meet these peculiar climatic condition we speak of.

Arrange to-day to have this Wedgewood sent to your home on approval. You won't be out a cent if it does not live up to all our claims. When we tell you that the Wedgewood is the only range that will cook perfectly under all conditions, we mean that it will cook better meals, with less fuel and less labor, than any other range made.

When we tell you we have the finest range built we make a very broad statement with an iron clad, money-back guarantee whereby we have everything to lose and nothing to gain if the Wedgewood range should fail to be as fine as we claim it is, after it is your own home. This is our guarantee: We will send a Wedgewood range to your home for thirty days' free trial—you to be the sole judge of its merit. After it is in your home you can examine its beauty, cook on it, see how little fuel it uses, put it to any test that you see fit.

If it does not live up to all our claims, we will take it back and you won't be out a cent. If it fulfills all our promises, you can either send the cash or arrange to pay our thirty-day free trial proposition does away with all risk that you take in buying an ordinary range. Arrange to-day to have a WEDGEWOOD sent to your home under this FREE trial proposition that we speak of.

Come in and See Our Full Line—we have them from $9.00 up to $65 with polished tops that need no blacking, or the old style that requires blacking—with legs or without—cast iron stove or steel, with glass doors or without. At any rate see us before buying. Your Old Stove Taken in Trade.

Chamber of Commerce Meets This Afternoon

Will Discuss the Matter of the Black Point Cut Off—Of Great Importance to Sonoma.

The Chamber of Commerce will meet at the City Hall this afternoon for the purpose of considering the matter of the Black Point cut-off.

The State appropriated $75,000 for the purpose of opening this road, but owing to certain obstacles which arose since the appropriation was made it was found that the amount was insufficient to carry on the work.

It is for the purpose of raising the money necessary to undertake the work that the meeting to be held this afternoon was called.

In order to build the road it will be necessary to purchase the right of way through the property of Stornetta, Yenni and Silva. This will require an expenditure of $1,450 and will make it possible to complete the road from Petaluma creek to the Sonoma county line, with the exception of the way through land owned by Burns and Marcucci. The cost of this property is not known at present as it may be possible to be compelled to resort to condemnation proceedings. It is suggested that about $2,000 will be required to secure the right of way through the property of the latter.

VALUE OF ROAD TO PRODUCER.

As the proposed new road, as already surveyed, means a shortening of the distance between Sonoma and San Francisco sixteen miles the importance of the matter can readily be seen.

From all over the Sonoma and Napa valleys, now isolated from San Francisco and separated from one another, it will be possible to operate motor trucks directly into the markets of San Francisco, carrying the most perishable and fragile products in three or four hours' time at an immense reduction in freight cost.

It will bring Napa Valley eighteen miles nearer the metropolis and effect more than 30 per cent of the producing population of the prolific Sonoma Valley. The summer resorts will be brought within an hour's motor run from San Francisco and for thousands of travelers who make weekly trips to San Francisco there will be a single ferry crossing instead of two.

SENIC VALUE OF ROAD.

Without this cutoff the scenic road around the bay ends nowhere, as far as the north bay counties are concerned. If completed, however, it would make immediately available the route that is the dream of all motorists within a hundred miles of San Francisco and would rank as one of the most important assets of the newly organized Tourist Association.

George B. Harrison, chief of right of way for the commission, and an expert on motor touring, stated that the journey around the harbor by the way of San Jose, Oakland, Berkeley, Vallejo and Mare Island, Napa, Black Point Cove and Marin county would entail a leisurely run of 190 miles, over the smoothest of paved roads easily accomplished in the dark and that the travelers returning by ferry would be given opportunity to enjoy a thirty minutes' view of the exposition illumination from the harbor.

"The instant popularity of such an outing cannot be overestimated," he said, "and there would be nothing to surpass it in California."

CALL OF MEETING.

The following is the official call of the Chamber of Commerce: Sonoma, Cal., Feb. 18, 15. Sonoma Valley Chamber of Commerce (Inc).

DEAR SIR—You are requested to attend a meeting of the Sonoma Valley Chamber of Commerce in regard to raising funds for the Black Point Cut Off, in the Sonoma City Hall, at 3 p. m., Saturday, Feb. 20, 1915.

JOHN F. PICETTI, Sec.
DR. A. M. THOMSON, Pres.

Films Failed to Materialize

The many patrons of the Don Theatre were disappointed Thursday night when it was announced that the films for "In the Bishop's Carriage" had been billed to Sonoma instead of Sonoma. Messrs. Collins & Moore announce that the great picture story, "The Call of the North" will be the attraction Saturday evening, Feb. 27.

Complete Separation

Acknowledged

It is an undeniable fact that when dairymen use an Empire Cream Separator that the cream is separated completely from the milk. So sure is the Empire Cream Separator Company that its machine is the best on the market that it welcome's comparison and test. F. Clewe, the local agent, has some interesting literature to give you if you will ask for it.

Local Jots.

The green hills of Sonoma are putting on heavier clothing each day.

Street crossings of stone are the most durable. We should have more of them.

People, don't forget that Monday will be Washington's birthday as well as Berthington's wash day.

Several of our citizens, left for the Exposition this morning, but O, you March 10th! We'll all be there then.

Miss Helen Cowan, of Bennett Valley and Miss Agnes Barry, of San Francisco, visited their aunt, Mrs. J. B. Small, Thursday.

The girls of the domestic department of the High school were the busiest in Sonoma all yesterday cooking for the feast for the banquet held last night.

Sixteen members of Verdant Rebekah Lodge, No. 94, last night assembled at the residence of Mrs. J. B. Small for the purpose of reorganizing the Sewing Circle.

CALIFORNIA.

The following poem, written by J. J. Galvin, has been dedicated to the Exposition:

"California, Wondrous Beauty," Swells the chorus on the breeze, "You today will wed Prospero, Chieftain of the Western Seas."

In your infancy we spoiled you, Pampered all your baby wiles; You could make us do your bidding, Change our musings into smiles.

In your girlhood as quizzical As the moonbeam on the lake, You had courtiers by the legion—Slaves who followed in your wake

As a sparkling debutante, Rounding into womanhood, You were crowned the fairest daughter In the dazzling sisterhood.

You were stricken then with sorrow—Sorrow often seeks the best—In your own loved San Francisco, Queenliest city of the west.

Your possessions all had vanished, Desolation rent the air; Fire and earthquake—dread disaster—

Piles of ruins everywhere. As the sun in haughty splendor, Shines the weakling clouds to shame,

You were lifted from your anguish By the glory of your name. In your jewel case were treasures—Souvenirs of days of yore—

And they builded up your city Loftier, grander, than before. Now, as matron, we'll adore you; You have passed the crucial flame;

And each coming generation Will add luster to your fame. California, how we love thee! We have waited long for this.

Now we give you to Prospero, Lover with the magic kiss.

By OSCAR COX

Edward Thorne was a very young man. A few men develop early and have then as much sense, though not as much experience as when they reach middle age. But Ned Thorne at twenty-one was still a very young man. He had outgrown the age (thirteen to fifteen) when a boy is little troubled about what kind of a cravat he will wear and was much exercised about the cut of his clothes. His tailor had great difficulty in pleasing him and was changed every season.

But there was one object of far more serious consideration with young Mr. Thorne than clothes. He was ambitious to fight some one. Probably if there had been a war when he came of age he would have joined the colors. But there was nothing but peace—quietness, jog trot peace and it was entirely out of keeping with his inclinations.

Ned spent a great deal of time thinking about the best way to settle disputes among gentlemen. He favored the idea that while fist fights would do for the unruly they were beneath persons who were refined. A scrap of that kind was liable to cover a man with dirt, bloody his nose and make him look like a scavenger.

Such were Mr. Thorne's views when he went to Europe, where duels were then and are still in vogue, especially in France. He had heard a great deal about bohemia in the Latin quarter of Paris and concluded to take a course in art; not that he was fitted for that profession—for a cloud and a haystack on his canvas could not readily be sold apart—but that he might mingle in the life of that part of Paris which was then given over to art students and grisettes.

So he rented a room and took lessons in an art school. He soon became acquainted with other students of different nationalities, though most of his associates were French. To the latter he regretted that in America there was no way for a gentleman to settle a dispute except through the courts. A man on being insulted to obtain satisfaction must get into a scuffle with a person, perhaps a coal heaver and quite likely very much stronger than he. Ned expressed himself as an admirer of the French method of the code.

His associates listened to these views and gained from them the impression that Ned was spoiling for a fight. Any body of young men between twenty and thirty years of age living together will become bohemian and, more than that, will be ready to play practical jokes on one another. One evening Ned went alone to the restaurant where he was used to dining. His intimate friends with whom he was accustomed to dine one and all had engagements to dine somewhere else. While Ned was eating his dinner a man came in and, taking a seat opposite him, scanned the bill of fare. Ned saw no necessity for the fellow to occupy the same table as himself and scowled at him. The man, looking up and seeing the frown, said politely: "Monsieur, you do not seem pleased with me for a visa-vis?"

"There are other tables vacant, and I confess I prefer to dine alone."

"That means that you do not consider me a proper person to dine so near you."

There was vin ordinaire (wine not charged for) on the table, and the man had poured out a glass of it. With his words he threw the contents into Ned's face, then, rising, laid a card on the table and, adding that he would not trouble the gentleman with his presence any longer, went to another table.

Ned wiped the wine off his face and front, hastily finished his dinner and, taking up the card, returned to his rooms. During the evening one of his friends, Jules Munier, came in, and Ned told him of the incident that had occurred to him. Munier asked to see the card the man had offered, and Ned, feeling in his pockets, produced it. When Munier looked at the name he started.

"Antoine Le Crux?" he exclaimed. "Great heavens, man, you are in for a fight with the most noted duelist in Paris!"

"You don't mean it?" said Ned, catching his breath.

"I do. And the worst of it is that Le Crux does not fight in the modern way, simply to show his skill by letting a little blood; he fights to kill."

It is quite likely that the American's courage would have oozed out of his fingers' ends if he had not been angered by what an older man would have considered a matter of trivial importance. When Munier entered Ned was holding up the shirt he had worn at dinner, which was bespattered with red wine. If there was any one article of his wardrobe he was proud of it was that shirt. It was, indeed, a beauty, a necklace of harmonious colors, and Ned's monogram was embroidered in large characters on the pocket.

"I don't care whether he is the most noted duelist in the universe. I'm going to make him pay for spoiling that shirt."

A faint smile curled the Frenchman's lip, but he took care that Ned should not see it.

"Well, what are you going to do about it?"

"Challenge him, of course. You go right off and attend to the matter for me."

"Had I not better try to settle it? He may accept an apology."

"I apologize to him? Not a bit of it!"

"But suppose he will apologize to you?"

"I'll accept no apology from the man who spoiled that shirt. I'll spoil one for him, only there'll be blood on it instead of claret."

At the moment Paul Desmoulins, another of Ned's friends, came in, and Munier communicated the affair to him, taking care to repress his mirth that the American was intending to fight the foremost duelist in France, and willingly, since he had spoiled his shirt. Desmoulins protested against an encounter in which Thorne would surely be killed, and the picture he drew of Ned's chances staggered him. But a glance at his shirt, which he continued to hold up for inspection, brought the blood to his cheek, and he swore he would have the heart's blood of the man who had ruined it.

Half an hour later Munier entered the room of Louis Girardet, a struggling artist, and, laughing, said: "It's working famously. He says he'll have your heart's blood."

"Why is he so revengeful? Was it the wine on his face?"

"No, the wine on his shirt. You ruined the best one in his wardrobe."

"Did you tell him that I only fight to kill?"

"Yes, and it would probably weaken him if he were not so enraged about the loss of his pet shirt."

Girardet looked grave.

"I've come," said Munier, "with a challenge. Paul came in as we had arranged, opportunely, and agreed to act as Thorne's second."

"But what are we to do?"

"I don't exactly know. We must find some way out of it. I never dreamed that he would insist on fighting when I told him you—or, rather, Le Crux, whose card you used—was the most noted duelist in France. Don't you think you could stand him off with foils till we can persuade him to cry 'Enough'?"

"I stand him off with foils? I'm no fencer."

"That's bad," thoughtfully. "Pistols won't do. Either he or you might get killed."

"What did you fellows mean by getting me into this scrape, anyway?"

"Why, we supposed his talk about dueling was a boyish fancy bubbling up in him. I think all would have gone well if you hadn't made him mad. You might have called him an ass or a puppy or anything like that, but when it came to bespattering the front of that immaculate shirt it was too much."

"How would it do for me to apologize?"

"He says he won't accept any apology from the man who ruined his shirt."

"How about getting him another one?"

"I don't believe we could match it."

"Well, you fellows who concocted this scheme have got to do something. I'm not going to get killed simply to furnish you sport."

There was a conference on the part of the conspirators, and after several hours of debate it was decided to appeal to the American's generosity. When the two dueling parties appeared the next morning at sunrise in the Bois de Boulogne the French principal appeared with his right arm in a sling.

"What does that mean?" asked the American.

"M. Le Crux has had the misfortune to break his right arm."

"Can he fence as well with his left?"

"Parbleu! He cannot fence at all with his left."

"Then what the dickens do you mean by standing me up against a man who can't defend himself?"

"Perhaps now that M. Le Crux is disabled he will offer an apology."

"Apology be hanged! Do you suppose I would bring an apology from a man on such terms?"

Munier went to the pretended Le Crux, conversed in an undertone and, returning to Thorne, said:

"M. Le Crux is much impressed with your generosity. He is sorry for what occurred and would be happy to replace the shirt he ruined, but he has just been robbed of all his ready money."

"Never mind the shirt; how much has he lost?"

"Five hundred francs" ($100).

Thorne took out his pocketbook and extracted five 100 franc notes.

"Here, tell him he needn't return this till he gets ready. Ask him if he will join us at breakfast at the Cafe d'Orleans."

The message was delivered and the invitation accepted. An hour later a party sat down in the Cafe d'Orleans and enjoyed the hospitality of the American who begged that the disabled duelist would excuse him for objecting even by a look to his taking a seat at the same table. Before the evening was over the joke was communicated to Ned, who by this time had come to a very good humor, and since he had turned the tables on the jokers he laughed more heartily than any of them.

Edward Thorne is now a middle aged man, and his wife avers that the only fault she finds with him is that he is very careless about his personal appearance.

Australian Pearls.

Pearls found on the coast of Australia are of many shapes and colors. Those under ten grains are sold by the ounce, above that by the grain. Color has a deal to do with the value. The white pearls go mostly to Europe and the yellow ones to India. In Australia an ounce of good white pearls will fetch up to $500, but sometimes realizing only a fifth of that amount. The yellow pearls may be rated on an average at about half the value of the white ones. The seed pearls used for cheap jewelry can be had for $5 per ounce and discolored pearls for 75 cts. but if the discoloration is peculiar the value is sometimes enhanced. For the low class of seed pearls there is a constant demand among oriental physicians and apothecaries, who grind them into a powder and administer it to patients as a cure for many ills.

Rather Vindictive.

PEACE TALK

There was a large audience at the union meeting at the Methodist Episcopal Church Sunday evening to listen to the "Peace" sermon by Rev. T. M. Price, pastor of the Congregational Church. Following is a condensed resume of the pertinent points touched on:

December, 1814, the Treaty of Ghent was concluded and John Quincy Adams gave utterance to the hope that it would be the last war between England and the United States. At a banquet given to the negotiators two weeks after, Mr. Adams proposed the toast, "Ghent and the Treaty of Peace, may the walls of Janus now closed be not opened for a century." It was an earnest wish but no one at the banquet thought of the treaty as more than a truce called by England to give her a chance to attend to weightier matters. Great Britain was a nation of nineteen million, the mightiest political power in Europe, a landed aristocracy, and had just crushed the greatest military genius of the day and had given a death blow to the democracy of the French Revolution. The United States, as a nation, had a population of eight million and was an object of ridicule in parliament, no where was she regarded as of consequence. She was only noted as another democracy going to an early grave.

The American commissioners had scarcely reached home before trouble began between Great Britain and the United States as important as those that are the nominal cause of war in Europe today. The convention of London was a contention over the privilege of trading in the English colonies in America; trouble arose on the Great Lakes; trouble over the treaty of Ghent; trouble over the right of search and impressment; and trouble over fishing rights secured by the treaty of 1783. There was trouble over the boundary line, over Oregon, over the English and Indians in the Mississippi valley, over discriminating duties, over the Trent, the Alabama, Venezuela, Seals on the Pacific coast, Alaska and the Yukon. These two nations, in spite of constant irritation, have remained at peace for over 100 years as an object lesson to the world.

They have refrained from war until they have become the lovers of peace. The nation of Great Britain has yielded to the good influences of a nobler spirit in government, and the United States has advanced in what she has drawn from her antagonist. The United States has had more trouble with England than the rest of the world and by this constant friction has lost its angles, while Great Britain has also gained.

It was not due to common speech, common literature, common tradition or kinship; there was no military caste, no alliance with other nations which are a source of evil; but they practiced a self control and used to each other a commendable courtesy.

These nations have a high standard of morals and the Zeit Geist has had its sway. They realize that war is hell and inflamed human passion, that peace is intelligence in truth and love that quickens divinity in the human breast. Peace is the international Christ mind and the same golden rule for individuals and nations. War is the market for lies and the beastliness of men. We are in the dawn of a new diplomacy and hear the demand of a new statesmanship.

Opposed to war is the Kingdom of God that will swing out beyond the classes and make us one as Jesus prayed. The Spirit Christ put in men has shown itself in missionary helpfulness, industrial education and in a general awakening of immortal souls. The inevitable future will sound the death knell of war and human life will resume its sublime.
